President's Report 2017

A year which saw employers on the back foot.

Anti-business sentiment and punishment focussed policy

In my last annual report I commented on the fact that 2016 election was a significant wake up call to business about how it tells its story and its consistency of messaging. During the long campaign leading up to polling day the major parties were outbidding each other to crack down on unscrupulous businesses.

Business was increasingly tarred by the actions of the few. There were a number of high profile triggers for all of this but the exposure and subsequent investigation by the Fair Work Ombudsman of employment practices in 7-Eleven franchises became a powerful symbol of what's wrong with business. These bad practices coming to light helped to underpin community reaction to employers.

The government was returned with a wafer thin majority. It had argued that because penalties under the Fair Work Act were insufficient and there was little perceived risk of being caught companies were exploiting vulnerable workers. Coalition policy promised additional funding to the Fair Work Ombudsman, a migrant workers taskforce in the Ombudsman and new legislation to provide a tenfold increase in penalties where there is intentional exploitation, new obligations on franchisors for the employment practices of franchisees and giving the Fair Work Ombudsman the power to compel answers.

The opposition's policy was even more punitive, looking at twentyfold increases and higher as well as possible criminal offences. More recently in NSW the leader of the state opposition, Mr Foley, has proposed prison sentences of up to 14 years for employers who engage in "wage theft".

The Government's Fair Work Amendment (Protecting Vulnerable Workers) Bill giving effect to its election policy seems likely to pass in September.

Of course business should do the right thing, employers should comply with their obligations and those which don't are a source of unfair competition. That's not at issue. The problem is policy making in the current climate. A focus on penalties, transfer of responsibility and increasing numbers of technical compliance obligations does not guarantee good policy which improves the likelihood that employees receive fair entitlements.

The Fair Work Commission's own research and a number of statements by the Fair Work Ombudsman say the same thing – many employers have difficulty complying with modern awards, they are just too difficult. In a recent decision a full bench headed by the President said

... an award should be able to be read by an employer or employee without needing a history lesson or a paid advocate to interpret how it is to apply in the workplace.

The same could be said about the unfair dismissal requirements – few businesses are totally confident they have got it right when they terminate an employee. Most settle with go-away money when challenged.

These difficulties are more likely to impact small businesses than larger. A small business is less likely to have the technical expertise, or the time, to navigate the system. It is more likely to be award regulated because the bargaining rules make it less likely that it will have an enterprise agreement. A small business' solution to making its obligations fit with its business reality is less likely to be fully effective.

A small example. Some small businesses strike an hourly rate above the award rate to cover off the allowances and penalty rates which an employee will attract for some of his or her working hours. This creates a breach of the award because the allowances or penalties are not paid, but if the employer and employee do not have a contract which provides that the over-award is paid to compensate for the allowances or penalties the over-award money cannot help to offset the underpayment. The business is exposed to paying not only the over-award, but also having to back pay the allowances and penalty rates, which depending on the award, might be calculated on the over-award rate.

A larger business paying an all-up rate is more likely to have a proper contractual offset term. ABI Council has been looking at this to see whether there is an achievable solution

To his credit, the President of the Fair Work Commission, Justice Ross, has asked Bruce Billson, the former Minister for Small Business, to investigate the difficulties small business has in dealing with the Commission and its awards. Bruce's findings have not been released at the time of writing.

The Australian Taxation Office says similar things about compliance with the superannuation guarantee. The superannuation guarantee laws are not well written to support the guarantee's objective, which is timely contributions on behalf of employees into their fund, and where a contribution is missed, early rectification so that the employee doesn't lose out on the contribution or its earnings.

"...an award should be able to be read by an employer or employee without needing a history lesson or a paid advocate to interpret how it is to apply in the workplace.1 "

A climate in which all sides in politics seek to demonstrate they are better at cracking down on business malpractice does not generally support good policy making.

Rather, "business can't be trusted" becomes the established norm, despite the fact that many businesses routinely support their communities, sponsor community activities and seek to respond to their employee's needs. Most employees do not distrust their own employer.

Intrusive, complicated obligations impact all employers, not just those doing the wrong thing. The difficult challenge is to craft obligations so that they support their objective and deal with the outlier seeking to avoid the obligation without encumbering those doing the right thing. The harder obligations are to comply with, the more likely they will be breached.

The 4-Yearly Review of Awards

The 4-yearly review of awards was again the major ongoing business of the year and it consumed Council time as well as demanding huge resources. ABI is represented by Australian Business Lawyers and Advisors in the Fair Work Commission and also seeks ABLA's advice in the more difficult legal issues which seem to be cropping up more frequently during the review.

Current examples of unexpected legal issues are whether the abandonment of employment provision in the manufacturing award is something which can be written in a modern award, and whether awards which require employees to give notice when they want to quit can also provide that the employer can deduct the amount of unworked notice from their termination payment if they fail to give the notice required under the award.

Over time the review has grown and extended. For example, parties with an interest in the Pharmacy Industry Award decided that they wanted to redraft the award to make it more accessible to users in that industry. This idea has given rise to a plain language re-draft process which now affects 14 awards with the promise of more to come. Plain language is to be applauded, but complicated conditions are still complicated. The process consumes an immense amount of resources.

Closer to home, ABI sought to vary a small number of awards which required that a terminating employee was given his or her final pay at the time of termination so that the terminating employee could be paid on the business' usual EFT pay cycle. We also sought to remove penalties for late payment of wages from a small number of awards when wages are paid by EFT.

We were basically successful in getting a clause which allowed payment on termination of cycle or no later than 7 days after termination, but because most awards did not provisions about final payments the clause has been extended to cover them all. The Commission also formed the view that monthly pay cycles should be by agreement and has asked for reasons why this should not be a standard clause. ABI is opposing this proposal and the Commission is yet to issue its concluded view.

Except for the Joinery award which was referred to another bench, we were successful in the late payment claim.

Penalty rates

ABI made claims to reduce the public holiday penalty rate in the Restaurant Industry Award and the Sunday and public holiday rates in the General Retail Industry Award and the Hair and Beauty Industry Award. We discontinued the Hair and Beauty Award claim because of insufficient evidence. Our claims were largely successful in the Commission, but there has been a great deal of political misinformation about the decision and its impact.

Taken together all the employer penalty rate claims were to reduce penalty rates in seven modern awards applying in the retail and hospitality sector which is a labour intensive service sector, reliant on discretionary spend, with low profit margins.

The Commission granted the reductions in penalty rates because they no longer met the modern awards objective. It decided that the award rates should be reduced as a matter of fairness to employers and employees covered by these awards. The Commission found that current Sunday and public holiday penalties were restricting trading, lowering staffing levels and restricting the type and range of services provided to the community. It also found that penalty rates under the Fair Work Act were not intended to discourage employers from operating during "unusual" hours, they were intended to compensate employees for the "disutility" of working those hours.

Most recently the unions have appealed the decision. The appeal will be heard by a full bench of the Federal Court and ABI has briefed a barrister to appear.

Para 32, Decision, 4 yearly review of modern awards – plain language re-drafting – Tranche 2 awards, [2017] FWCFB 4447

Annual Wage Review

The 2017 annual wage review decision was for a 3.3% increase to the national minimum wage and award wages. This was significantly more than we argued for and also higher than we expected. In a period of low inflation the increase was generous.

Aside from the disappointment about the size of the outcome there is a concern about what seems to be a change in thinking by the Minimum Wage Panel. The Panel appears to be forming the view that the labour market is able to absorb higher increases to minimum wages without triggering a reduction in the amount of work on offer to award-reliant employees than it had previously thought.

Council has been looking at ways to challenge this view in the next annual wage review.

Legislation

Council has been very active considering the many bills which have been tabled in parliament as well as looking at reforms which can help to restore the balance. It has worked closely with the Australian Chamber of Commerce and Industry. The arrangement where Dick Grozier also works for the Australian Chamber continues.

ABI elections

2016 – 17 has also been a year of elections for ABI. ABI's council was declared elected in July 2016, for the first time under the new 4 year term. Since then there have been two resignations each of which has required a new election. The first, triggered by Kathleen Collin's resignation because she changed jobs, resulted in the election of Brooke Jennings. The second, triggered by Anni Brownjohn who resigned to devote her full energy to recovering from Cyclone Debbie, is currently in train.

The Australian Electoral Commission conducts ABI's elections.

ABI Rules

Disclosures - ABI's rules require its officers to disclose any material personal interests relevant to ABI's operations that they or their close relatives acquire and also any remuneration received from external boards because of being an officer of ABI, or because nominated by ABI. As well, the remuneration of the 5 most highly paid officers must be disclosed. Councillors are officers, but under its rules ABI's councillors are not remunerated, and ABI does not directly employ. Councillors are reimbursed for validated travel expenditure but most make no claim.

There were no material personal interests requiring disclosure.

In the 2016–17 year I also chaired the NSW Business Chamber's workplace policy committee for which I received $9,592 inclusive of superannuation guarantee contribution. This is also reported in the new Officer and Related Party Disclosure Statement circulated with the annual report.

Training – Our rules also require all councillors to undertake approved training within 6 months of becoming a councillor. All councillors have successfully completed their approved training.

Council is also looking at whether it can simplify the rules following recent amendments to the Fair Work (Registered Organisations) Act.

Thank you

A difficult year with lots on and the complicated problem of how to get employers' needs properly heard.

Thank you to my councillors for all the work they have put in and their willingness to think outside the usual. Thanks, too, to the support from the NSW Business Chamber.

Whilst it's not a comprehensive list of those who supported ABI during the year, I'd like to especially mention Luis Izzo of Australian Business Lawyers and Advisors who not only helped to firm up views in key matters but also stood in as Executive Officer for part of the year, Alana Matheson of the Australian Chamber of Commerce and Industry who gave us a deeper understanding of how the Australian Chamber was thinking of things, Rebecca Burdick (workforce skills) and Elizabeth Greenwood (workers compensation and WHS) NSWBC's wonderful policy officers who kept council up to date on their policy areas, and as always Dick Grozier.

1 Summary of significant accounting policies

The principal accounting policies adopted in the preparation of these financial statements are set out below. These policies have been consistently applied to all the years presented, unless otherwise stated. The financial statements are for Australian Business Industrial ("the Organisation").

(a) Basis of preparation

These general purpose financial statements have been prepared in accordance with Australian Accounting Standards and Interpretations issued by the Australian Accounting Standards Board (AASB) and apply for the reporting period and the Fair Work (Registered Organisation) Act 2009.

Historical cost convention

The financial statements have been prepared on an accruals basis in accordance with the historical cost convention, except for investments, which are at fair value through profit or loss. Unless stated otherwise the accounting policies described below are consistent with those applied in the prior year.

Comparative amounts

When required by Accounting Standards, comparative figures have been adjusted to conform to changes in presentation for the current financial year.

(b) Critical accounting judgements and key sources of estimation uncertainty

Critical judgements in applying the company's accounting policies

There are no critical judgements that management has made in the process of applying the organisation's accounting policies at balance date that have a significant effect on the amounts recognised in the financial statements.

Key sources of estimation uncertainty

There are no key assumptions or sources of estimation uncertainty at balance date that have a significant risk of causing a material adjustment to the carrying amounts of assets and liabilities within the next financial year.

(c) New Australian Accounting Standards

Adoption of New Australian Accounting Standard Requirements

No accounting standard has been adopted earlier than the application date stated in the standard.

The accounting policies adopted are consistent with those of the previous financial year.

Future Australian Accounting Standards Requirements

Certain new accounting standards and interpretations have been published that are not mandatory for 30 June 2017 reporting periods and have not been early adopted by the organisation. The organisation's assessment of the impact of these new standards and interpretations is set out below.

AASB 15 Revenue from Contracts with Customers

Nature of change

The AASB has issued a new standard for the recognition of revenue. This will replace AASB 118 which covers revenue arising from the sale of goods and the rendering of services and AASB 111 which covers construction contracts. The new standard is based on the principle that revenue is recognised when control of a good or service transfers to a customer. The standard permits either a full retrospective or a modified retrospective approach for the adoption.

Impact

Management is currently assessing the effects of applying the new standard on the organisation's financial statements and has identified the following areas that are likely to be affected:

- the application of AASB 15 may result in the identification of separate performance obligations which could affect the timing of the recognition of revenue.
- accounting for certain costs incurred in fulfilling a contract – certain costs which are currently expensed may need to be recognised as an asset under AASB 15, and

At this stage, the company is not able to estimate the effect of the new rules on the organisation's financial report. The company will make more detailed assessments of the effect over the next twelve months.

Mandatory application date / Date of adoption by the organisation.

Mandatory for financial years commencing on or after 1 January 2018, but available for early adoption.

Expected date of adoption by the organisation: 1 July 2018.

(d) Fair value measurement

The carrying amounts of trade and other receivables and trade and other payables are valued at their fair value due to their short-term nature. There are no assets or liabilities contained in the financial statements that are materially different to their fair value.

(e) Foreign currency

The financial statements are presented in Australian dollars, which is the Organisation's functional and presentation currency.

(f) Revenue recognition

Revenue is measured at the fair value of the consideration received or receivable. Amounts disclosed as revenue are net of discounts.

The organisation recognises revenue when the amount of revenue can be reliably measured, it is probable that future economic benefits will flow to the organisation and specific criteria have been met for each of the organisation's activities as described below. The organisation bases its estimates on historical results, taking into consideration the type of customer, the type of transaction and the specifics of each arrangement.

Revenue is recognised for the organisation's major business activities as follows:

i. Membership subscriptions comprise annual subscriptions for the year and are recognised as revenue on a monthly basis over the period of the membership

- ii. Sponsorship income is brought to account when control is obtained over sponsorship funds
- iii. Interest income is recognised when earned.

(g) Cash and cash equivalents

For the purpose of presentation in the cash flow statement, cash and cash equivalents includes cash on hand, deposits held at call with financial institutions, other short-term, highly liquid investments with original maturities of three months or less that are readily convertible to known amounts of cash and which are subject to an insignificant risk of changes in value.

(h) Trade receivables

Trade receivables are recognised initially at fair value and subsequently measured at amortised cost using the effective interest method, less provision for impairment. Trade receivables are generally due for settlement within 30 days.

Collectability of trade receivables is reviewed on an ongoing basis. Debts which are known to be uncollectible are written off by reducing the carrying amount directly. A provision for impairment of trade receivables is used when there is objective evidence that the organisation will not be able to collect all amounts due according to the original terms of the receivables.

The amount of the impairment loss is recognised in the statement of comprehensive income within other expenses. When a trade receivable for which an impairment allowance had been recognised becomes uncollectible in a subsequent period, it is written off against the allowance account. Subsequent recoveries of amounts previously written off are credited against other expenses in the statement of comprehensive income.

(i) Trade and other payables

These amounts represent liabilities for goods and services provided to the organisation prior to the end of the financial year and which are unpaid. The amounts are unsecured and are usually paid within 30 days of recognition. Trade and other payables are presented as current liabilities unless payment is not due within 12 months from the reporting date. They are recognised initially at their fair value and subsequently measured at amortised cost using the effective interest method.

(j) Goods and Services Tax (GST)

Revenues, expenses and assets are recognised net of GST, unless the GST incurred is not recoverable from the Australian Taxation Office. In this case it is recognised as part of the cost of acquisition of the asset or as part of the expense.

Receivables and payables are stated inclusive of the amount of GST receivable or payable. The net amount of GST recoverable from, or payable to, the Australian Taxation Office is included with other receivables or payables in the balance sheet.

Cash flows are presented on a gross basis. The GST component of cash flows arising from investing or financing activities which are recoverable from, or payable to the Australian Taxation Office, are presented as operating cash flows.

(k) Income tax

Australian Business Industrial is a not-for-profit employers' association and hence is exempt from income tax under section 50.15 of the Income Tax Assessment Act 1997.

2 Financial risk management

The Organisation's activities expose it to credit risk and liquidity risk. The Organisation's overall risk management program focuses on the unpredictability of financial markets and seeks to minimise potential adverse effects on the financial performance of the Organisation. The Organisation uses different methods to measure different types of risk to which it is exposed. These methods include regular review of trade receivables ageing analysis for credit risk.

The Organisation has no substantial financial assets or liabilities that are exposed to interest rate risk.

a. Credit Risk

Credit risk arises from exposure to counterparties that may not meet their contractual obligations with the Organisation. The Organisation's exposure to credit risk primarily arises from its trade receivables.

The maximum exposure to credit risk at reporting date to recognised financial assets is the carrying amount of those assets, net of any provisions for doubtful debts, as disclosed in the balance sheet and notes to the financial statements.

The Organisation does not have any material credit risk exposure to any single debtor or group of debtors under financial instruments entered into by the Organisation.

The credit quality of financial assets that are neither past due nor impaired can be assessed by reference to external credit ratings (where available).

b. Liquidity Risk

The Organisation's liquidity risk arises from the risk that it will encounter difficulty in meeting its obligations associated with financial liabilities. The Organisation manages liquidity risk by continuously monitoring forecast and actual cash flows and matching profiles of financial assets and liabilities.

The table below shows the contractual maturity of the Organisation's financial liabilities.
